APPENDIX 2 ANNEX I

Data'

Tables I to IV show the set of variables that were utilized in the testing of the relationship between concentration and efficiency by implementing the domestic distortion approach. Malaysia was chosen because of the availability of structural data. As a matter of fact in a recent paper Yusof (1994) presented at a seminar on competition policy and restrictive business practices (organized by the Ministry of Domestic Trade and Consumer Affairs of Malaysia, Institute of Diplomacy and Foreign Affairs, and UNCTAD), the four-firm concentration ratio (CR4) by Malaysian manufacturing industries was quoted. These data were used as a proxy variable for market structure for each Malaysian manufacturing sector (ISIC classification¹⁰). Nevertheless, agricultural and non-tradable products were not taken into consideration in this analysis.

The statistical basis used includes: the normalized trade balance (NB) of the SITC2¹¹ classification, considering a total of about 10,000 products; tariff (T) and other restrictive practices applied at border - as trade coverage (TC) - of the HS classification¹², filing for a total of about 10,000 products; gross-output (GO), value-added (VA) and employment (EMP) of the ISIC three-digit classification.

According to this set of data, the mean values of tariff and trade coverage (TC) and the sum of products burdened by non-tariff measures (FREQ) were obtained. The value of total Malaysian imports for each product was used to calculate the weighted average tariff rates (TW).

This was done by working out a connecting table between the International Standard Industrial Classification (Rev. 2), five-digit, the Standard International Trade Classification (Rev. 2), 5-digit, and the Harmonized System Classification, six-digit.
