

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abstract	i
Acknowledgment	iii
Table of Contents	v
Transliteration system	ix
Abbreviation	x
Introduction	xi

CHAPTER ONE: MALIK BENNABI'S LIFE AND CONTRIBUTIONS

TO ISLAMIC THOUGHT

Introduction	2
I- Bennabi's life and studies	4
A- Birth and Family	4
B- Childhood and adolescence	8
C- Life and study in Constantine	15
D- Life and higher education In France	21
E- Life and activities in Egypt	30
F- Return to Algeria	32
II- Bennabi's personality and thought: An overview on the influence of the social-cultural context	34
A- The political, economic and social change	34
B- The Algerian awakening	43
C- The national press	46
D- Bennabi's involvement in the political and religious activities	48
- Radical anti-colonial nationalism	49

	- Liberal assimilationists	52
	- The Association of the Muslim Algerian clergy	55
	E- Bennabi's view on the Algerian process of decolonization	58
III-	Bennabi's contributions to Islamic thought	65
	A- Bennabi's intellectual works	67
	B- Classification of Bennabi's works	69
IV-	Observations on Bennabi's personality and thought	72

CHAPTER TWO: THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK OF MALIK

BENNABI'S METHOD

	Introduction	81
I-	Notion of the Renaissance	83
	A- Nature of the crisis of Islamic civilization	86
	B- Bennabi's view on the nature of the crisis	96
	C- Treatment of the civilizational problem: Nature of the method	109
II-	The essential equation of civilization	117
	A- General exposition on the definition of civilization	118
	B- Bennabi's definition of civilization	122
	C- Ingredients of the equation of civilization	128
	1- Man and civilizational transformation	134
	2- Soil and the social commodities	141
	3- Time and its civilizational value	145
	4- Religion as a catalyst of civilization	150
III-	Bennabi's interpretation of the movement of civilization	157
	A- Bennabi's evaluation of the theories of civilization	158
	B- Bennabi's view of the civilization movement	165

IV- Observations on Bennabi's theoretical framework	169
---	-----

CHAPTER THREE: ANALYTICAL TOOLS OF BENNABI'S METHOD

Introduction	184
I- Concept of the three historical-cultural positions of a society	187
A- Society in the pre-civilized position	190
B- Society in the civilization position	194
C- Society in the post-civilized position	197
II- Concept of the three realms of a civilization	204
A- Realm of persons	207
B- Realm of ideas	212
C- Realm of objects	221
III- Concept of the three psychosocial ages of a society	225
A- The three psychosocial ages of the development of an individual	226
B- The three psychosocial ages of the development of a society	231
C- Disequilibrium in the three realms and the phenomenon of decline	235
IV- Concept of social relations network	240
A- Definition of a society: The concept of motion and social relations	242
B- Types of human association and birth of a society	247
C- Social relations network as a tool of analysis	253
V- Concept of the cyclical movement of a civilization	263
A- Definition of the cyclical movement of a civilization	264
B- Cycle of civilization as a tool of analysis	269
C- The psychosocial dimension of the cycle of civilization	276
VI- Observations on Bennabi's tools of analysis	287

CHAPTER FOUR: APPLICATION OF BENNABI'S METHOD ON THE STUDY OF ISLAMIC CIVILIZATION

Introduction	307
I- Bennabi's view of the evolution of Islamic civilization	309
A- The spiritual phase and birth of a society	309
B- The rational phase and the expansion of Islamic civilization	327
C- The instinctive phase and the decline of Islamic civilization	334
II- Bennabi's view of the reconstruction of Islamic civilization	342
A- General expose on the concept of culture	347
B- Bennabi's view of culture: The link between civilization and culture	352
III- The educational project of culture: Orientation and method	362
A- The ethical constitution	364
B- The aesthetic sense	367
C- The practical reasoning	371
D- The technique and skills	373
IV- Observations on Bennabi's application of the method	376

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

Concluding Remarks	392
Glossary	399
Bibliography	410