ABSTRACT

This study identifies and analyzes the Multimedia Islamic Instructional Resource Materials (MIIRM) on the Internet to suggest different search techniques via commercially available software and online search engines which were combined to improve search results for MIIRM.

It is critical to understand that there are a variety of search strategies, each designed to satisfy specific information needs and requirements. There are at least two major types of material searches in the Internet: (a) general and (b) focused. Search strategies and search tools will change as information needs to be updated and upgraded. A general search seeks adequate information to satisfy an information need. While a focused search seeks information that meets specifically defined criteria.

This study surveys 100 Islamic sites using 17 search engines through various search approaches and other available options. Questionnaire has been circulated via email to MIIRM source providers. The findings indicated that there are a big number of MIIRM in the Internet, though not all are organized. This study also analyzes MIIRM content and presentation using adopted instructional material development patterns.

In conclusion this study indicates that Islamic multimedia can be further improved compared to other sources of information in the Internet. This requires the commitment and dedication of the MIIRM authors, information providers and search engine designers in the rationalization and standardization of the MIIRM on the Internet.

Acknowledgments

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

"One who had the knowledge of the Book said: I will bring it to you in the twinkling of an eye. Then when he saw it settled beside him, he said: This is of the grace of my Lord that He may try me whether I am grateful or ungrateful; and whoever is grateful, he is grateful only for his own soul, and whoever is ungrateful, then surely my Lord is Self-sufficient, Honored."
