ABSTRACT

This study seeks to identify the employment of Brown and Levinson's Politeness strategies (1978, 1987) on two Malay dialects, which are the Standard Malay and the Kelantanese dialect. The study intends to identify what politeness strategies were employed when the speakers of these two dialects converse. Consequently, the study also looks into which of the politeness strategies were frequented by the participants when conversing. Based on the findings, despite the dialectal differences, which could be potentially face threatening the results showed that the participants did in fact employ more 'bald on record' strategies when conversing among one another. The bald on record strategy is typically known as face threatening as there is no attempt to redress the utterance. However, utterances that were made 'bald on record' were not harmful to the rapport of the conversation. In fact, the participants reciprocated. Secondly, the participants were also found to employ more 'positive politeness' strategies while interacting. This was an indicator that the participants wanted to maintain solidarity. 'Negative politeness' is the next politeness strategy used by the participants. The mutual relationship that the participants already have lend to the fact that negative politeness was not as favored as the previous strategies. This strategy required them to redress their FTAs in a manner that is not intrusive and is respectful of personal space. Lastly, the 'off record' strategy was also found in the analysis but is used minimally. Off records are supposedly to be FTAs that are the least threatening as they are very graceful and indirect. In conclusion, the study shows that the participants, regardless of the differences in the dialects they speak, are able to converse mutually despite the dependency on bald on record FTAs.

ABSTRAK

Kajian ini dilakukan untuk mengkaji aspek Kesopanan Brown dan Levinson (1978, 1987) di dalam dua dialek Melayu iaitu Bahasa Melayu Standard dan Dialek Kelantan. Kajian ini ingin mengkaji apakah strategi Kesopanan yang digunakan oleh peserta-peserta ketika bertutur. Seterusnya, kajian ini juga meneliti kekerapan dalam penggunaan strategi Kesopanan dalam perbualan peserta-peserta tersebut. Berdasarkan pada dapatan kajian ini, didapati strategi kesopanan 'lakukan mengancam air muka' mendapat bilangan pilihan tertinggi. Ini menunjukkan keserasian peserta-peserta dalam mengaplikasikan strategi ini yang lebih mengutamakan kelancaran dan ketelusan, walaupun pada hakikatnya, strategi ini lebih mengancam air muka seseorang. Seterusnya, dapatan daripada kajian ini menunjukkan bahawa strategi 'air muka positif' mendapat pilihan kedua tertinggi dalam penggunaan strategi kesopanan Brown and Levinson. Strategi ini menitikberatkan 'kesaksamaan' dan 'keserasiaan' antara satu sama lain. Strategi 'air muka negatif' juga terdapat dalam perbualan peserta-peserta yang terlibat. Walaubagaimanapun, ia tidak begitu ketara kerana strategi ini tidak begitu relevan dalam konteks perhubungan peserta-peserta yang jelasnya sudah akrab. Ini kerana strategi ini mengambil kira ruang autonomi dan kebebasan seseorang. Strategi yang diguna dengan kadar paling rendah ialah strategi 'melakukan tindakan secara tidak rasmi'. Berdasarkan keakraban hubungan peserta, strategi ini yang lebih menitikberatkan lakukan atau percakapan yang lebih halus dan berlapik didapati tidak begitu relevan dalam perbualan mereka. Dengan itu, kajian ini membuktikan bahawa walaupun terdapat perbezaan dari segi dialek diantara peserta, peserta masih mampu berbual dalam keadaan yang mesra walaupun pemilihan strategi mereka adalah lebih berbentuk mengancam air muka seseorang iaitu strategi 'lakukan mengancam air muka'.
