<td>a. Al-Sa‘āda (Happiness) is the central concept in Miskawayh’s ethical philosophy. It is for the highest good (afdal al-khayrāt) and the ultimate aim (al-ghāyat al-quswā) of life (Ibn Miskawayh, 90, Ansari, 67). A thorough discussion on happiness is discussed in his third chapter of Tahdhīb al-Akhlāq.</td>

b. Kamāl al-Insān (Human Perfection)

It is clearly stated that the perfection (al-kamāl) of both the theoretical (al-‘ālima) and the practical perfection (al-‘āmila) is the objective (gharad) (Ibn Miskawayh, 50, Ansari, 75-76) of human life. According to Miskawayh, the accomplishment of both aspects of human perfection leads towards ultimate happiness (al-sa’āda al-tāmma).

b. There are two aspects of human perfection (al-kamāl al-khās bi’l insān) (Ibn Miskawayh, 49):

a. al-‘ālima (theoretical perfection) : perfection in knowledge and sciences (al-ma‘ārif wa’l ‘ulum)

b. al-‘āmila (practical perfection) : perfection in all kinds of action and governance (nizām al-‘umur wa tar'tibuha)

The combination of both aspects of perfection lead towards the accomplishment of happiness (al-sa’āda al-tāmma) (Ibn Miskawayh, 50).

c. Tahdhīb al-Akhlāq (Refinement of Character)

Character refinement begins with the purification of the soul. Tahdhīb al-Akhlāq (Refinement of Character) is referred to the title of the book and its objective is mentioned in the introductory remark of Miskawayh:

“The purpose of writing this book is that we may cultivate such characters of our soul (an nahiṣila li anzusinā khuluqan) that every act proceeding from them will be good, easy and spontaneous (bn Miskawayh, 9, Ansari, 117).”

It is also mentioned in one his prayers in Tahdhīb that may Allah bestow us the strength to refine the souls (tahdhīb ādhihi al-nufūs) that guide us towards the obedience in

c. In Tahdhīb al-Akhlāq, Miskawayh deliberated on the second component of perfection (al-kamāl) i.e.: the Practical Perfection (al-quwwa al-‘āmila) which is referred to as the Moral Perfection (al-kamāl al-khuluqīy) (Ibn Miskawayh, 50).

Deliberation on the Moral Perfection combines both:

a. the theoretical aspects (the what)

b. the practical aspects (the how) aspects of ethics (Ansari, 117).

According to Miskawayh, knowledge (al-‘ilm) is the beginning (mabda’) and practice (al-‘amal) is the accomplishment (tamām) (Ibn Miskawayh, 50). Therefore both aspects of perfection complement each other; none can be fully realized.
Allah (tāʿatilla) which finally leads towards our salvation (najātna), the greatest victory (al-fawz al-akbar) and the everlasting bliss (al-naʿīm al-sarmadiyy) (ibn Miskawayh, 64).

d. Al-Fadhāʾil (Cardinal Virtues):

i. Al-Hikma (Wisdom)

According to Miskawayh, the four cardinal virtues are deduced from the three faculties of the soul (Ibn Miskawayh, 24, Ansari, 97). Virtue is described as the mean between the two undesirable extremes (Ansari, 97):

i. al-Hikma (Wisdom) – the virtue that is derived from the rational soul (al-nafs al-nātiqa) (Ibn Miskawayh, 24).

The virtues categorized under al-hikma (wisdom) are:

a. al-Dhakāʾ (Intelligence)

b. al-Dhikr (Memory)

c. al-Taʿaqquʾul (Intellection)

d. Sūrʿat al-Fahm (Quickness of understanding)

e. Safāʾ al-Dīhni (Clarity of thought)

f. Suhūlat al-taʿallum (Ability of the soul to acquire knowledge) (Miskawayh, 27, Ansari, 106).
| ii. Al-Shajā’a (Courage) | ii. al-Shajā’a (Courage) – the virtue derived from the faculty of anger or the spirited soul (al-nafs al-ghadabiyya) (Ibn Miskawayh, 24). Virtues categorized under al-shajā’a (courage) include:
|                       | a. Kibr al-nafs (Great-soufullness)
|                       | b. al-Najda (Self-reliance in facing danger)
|                       | c. ‘Azm al-himma (High-mindedness)
|                       | d. al-Thibāt (Firmness)
|                       | e. al-Sabr (Patience)
|                       | f. al-Hilm (Forbearance)
|                       | g. al-Sukūn (Peacefulness)
|                       | h. al-Shahāma (Chivalry)
|                       | i. Ihtimāl al-kadd (Physical exertion for the achievement of moral ideas). |
| iii. Al-‘Iffa (Temperance) | iii. al-‘Ifā (Temperance) – the virtue derived from the faculty of desire or the appetitive soul (al-nafs al-shahwiyya) (Ibn Miskawayh, 23-24, Ansari, 96-105).
|                       | Virtue categorized under al-‘iffā (temperance) are:
|                       | a. al-Hayā’ (Modesty)
|                       | b. al-Dī’ah (Self-composure or calmness)
|                       | c. al-Sabr (Patience)

iv. Al-Adāla (Justice)

d. al-Sakhā’ (Generosity)
e. al-Hurriyya (Freedom from desire)
f. al-Qanā’a (Contentment)
g. al-Dimātha (Preference for the good, the beautiful & the lovely)
h. al-Intizām (Orderliness)
i. Husn al-Hādy (Love of self-adornment that leads towards the perfection of the soul)
j. al-Musālama (friendship with fellow human beings)
k. al-Waqar (Dignity)
l. al-Wara’ (Consistent performance of noble and good acts which perfect the soul) (Miskawayh, 28, Ansari, 102-103).

iv. Al-‘Adāla (Justice) – the virtue of the entire soul resulted from the balanced state (i’tidāl) of the three faculties of the soul (Ibn Miskawayh, 24, Ansari, 107). It is the essence of all virtues since the essence of virtue is balance or moderation (i’tidāl). Virtues that are categorized under justice (‘adāla) comprises:

a. al-Sadaqa (Truthfulness)
d. Al-Insān al-Kāmil (The Perfect Man)

Miskawayh believes that the lowest of human ranks are those whose rational faculty is weak and their beastly soul strong. As a result, this type of person is obsessed with desires and pleasure. Whereas the highest human rank is a completely rational man and the person of full knowledge and discernment. At a higher level, the person ranks between man and angel (Miskawayh, 56-57, Zurayk, 42-43).

b. al-’Ulfā (Affection)

c. Sīlat al-Rahm (Human Relationship)

d. al-Mukāfa’a (return of benevolence)

e. Husn al-Shirka (fairness in giving and receiving)
f. Husn al-Qadā’ (payment of remuneration without any grudge), etc. (Miskawayh, 32, Ansari, 108-109).

The purification of the soul and the refinement of character will finally lead towards a perfect human being (al-insān al-kāmil) who possesses the virtuous character. According to Miskawayh, the path that leads towards a perfect human being begins with love towards knowledge and sciences (al-shawq ilā al-ma’ārif wa’l-‘ulūm) (Ibn Miskawayh, 81). He will become a wise man (hakīman) who will be illuminated by the transcendental light (nūr al-ufūq al-a’lā) and prepared to receive God’s Illumination (al-fayd al-Ilāhiy) and His gifts (mawāhib Allah) (Ibn Miskawayh, 81). Prophets who are at a higher level from this stage receives the Revelation (al-wahy) (Ibn Miskawayh, 81). The above path will finally lead a perfect man (al-insān al-kāmil) towards Ultimate Happiness (al-sa’āda al-quswā) in his life (Ibn Miskawayh, 83).
2. Curriculum Content

a. Definition of Character (al-Khuluq)

The Chapter on Ethics begins with Miskawayh’s definition of Character (al-Khuluq), which is significant to his discourse on ethics.

Ibn Miskawah’s definition of character (al-khuluq):
a state of the soul (hāl li’l nafs) which enables it to perform its actions without any reflection or deliberation (min ghyr fikr wa lā rawiya) (Ibn Miskawayh, 41, Ansari, 83).

According to Miskawayh, there are two types of Character:

1. Naturally inborn character: a natural temperament (tābī’iyyan: min asl mizāj);
2. Character that is formed through custom and training (bi’l ‘āda wa’l tadarrub) which begins with reflection and deliberation, but later it gradually becomes a faculty (malaka) and character (khuluqan) (Ibn Miskawayh, 41, Ansari, 83).

Based on his observation, Miskawayh rejected the view that described character as unalterable since it is completely determined by nature. He believed that character is formed and shaped sooner or later, through education and learning (bi’l ta’dīb wa’l ta’lim), and through the association with good and virtuous people (bi mujālasa al-akhyār wa ahl fadl) (Ibn Miskawayh, 41-42, Ansari, 84-85).
b. Sources of Children’s Character Education:

Miskawayh specifically discussed Syarī’a as one of the sources for Character Education.

Islamik Law (al-Sharī’a) is the source of Character Education in order to:
1. Reform the young;
2. Accustom them to good deeds;
3. Prepare their souls to receive wisdom;
4. Seek virtue; and
5. Attain human happiness through sound thinking and correct reasoning (Ibn Miskawayh, 45, Ansari, 32).

Human soul is developed based on the development of natural order (al-nizām al-tabī’iy) (Ibn Miskawayh, 46). The faculty that formed first is common to all animals and plants, then the distinctive qualities begin to appear until it achieves human attributes that begins with:
1. Faculty of desire especially the desire (al-shahwa) for food;
2. Faculty of imagination (al-khayāliyya);
3. Next, faculty of anger (al-ghadab) is developed; and
4. Finally, faculty that derives knowledge and sciences (alm-‘arif wa’l-‘ulūm) developed in human soul.

Miskawayh’s educational method in character education is based on the principle of natural order gradually developed in human being. It is important to understand the concept of natural order (al-nizām al-tabī’iy) in Miskawayh’s discourse of ethics.

c. Development of human soul:

Miskawayh’s educational method in character education is based on the principle of natural order gradually developed in human being. It is important to understand the concept of natural order (al-nizām al-tabī’iy) in Miskawayh’s discourse of ethics.
d. Educational Methods in the Formation of Good Character:

Miskawayh propagates Character Education for children and youth since it is easier to undergo the refinement process during this period. It is difficult to change bad habits or character if they are already established in the soul. In this case, Miskawayh himself had to undergo a tremendous process of character refinement to get rid of the bad habits that had already been entrenched in him (Miskawayh, 60, Zurayk, 45).

Miskawayh emphasizes on training the children to:

1. Observe and guide the character of modesty (al-hayā‘) i.e. the sign of intelligence that appear during the age of discernment (Miskawayh, 67, Zurayk, 50);

2. Observe their socialization – avoid from any association (mukhālata) with people who might corrupt their character (Miskawayh, 67) and encourage their companionship with noble people (mujālasat al-akhyār wa ahl al-fadl);

3. Habituate them in the love of honor (hubb al-karāma) through the practice of religion and the observance of religious duties rather than money (bi‘l dīn dūn‘l māl) (Miskawayh, 67, Zurayk, 51);

   - begins with (the formation) of good manners in eating (adab al-matā‘im). (Miskawayh, 69)
   - good manners in dressing (adab al-malābis)
   - good manners during sleeping (adab al-nawm)
   - good manners in speech (adab al-kalām) (Miskawayh, 68-75, Zurayk, 52-55);
5. Reinforcing their good habits and character by complimentary praises (madh) and preventing them from bad habits through admonishment or warning (al-taubīkh) (Miskawayh, 69, Zurayk, 52);

6. Refining the soul (tahdhīb al-nufūs) by habituating them through a rough life (al-khushūna) and avoidance of laziness (al-kasl) (Miskawayh, 71, Zurayk, 54);

7. Develop good character through instruction (ta’līm) and knowledge (al-‘ilm)–memorising (hifz) good tradition (mahāsin al-akhbār) and poems (al-ash‘ār) (Miskawayh, 68). Older children should be encouraged to:

1. Adhere to Syari‘a, observe its requirements until it become habits in themselves;

2. Study the works of ethics so that the moral qualities become confirmed in him by rational demonstration (Miskawayh, 60, Zurayk, 45); and

3. Learn the science of arithmetic and geometry (al-hisāb wa’l handasa) so that he becomes accustomed to veracity in speech and correctness in demonstration (barāhin) (Miskawayh, 60, Zurayk, 45).

First: The faculty of desire (al-shahwa) – begins with the desire (al-shahwa) for food and then develops into pleasures.

Second: The faculty of imagination (al-khayāliyya)

Third: The faculty of anger (al-ghadab) by which he tries to defend himself

Fourth: The faculty of discernment (al-tamyīz) which gradually develops until it reaches its intellectual perfection at which stage he is called a rational being (‘āqīlan). The first sign of intelligence at this stage is modesty (al-hayā’ – an evidence that he is prepared for education (al-ta’dīb)).

d. Educational Methods in the Formation of Good Character:

Character is formed through:

1. Instruction (Ta‘līm) / Knowledge (al-‘ilm) – memorising (hifz) good tradition (mahāsin al-akhbār) and poems (al-ash‘ār).

2. Socialization (Mujālasa al-akhyār wa ahl al-fadl)

SUMMARY OF CONTENT ANALYSIS [PART 2]

The content analysis of both classical texts will be divided into 2 Main Categories: The Objectives and The Curriculum Content. The Main Categories will be later divided into its Sub-categories. The researcher will firstly analyze al-Ghazali’s Second Chapter of the Third Volume of Ihyā’ Ulūm al-Dīn.

1. Objectives:
a. Al-Saʿāda (Happiness):

Al-Saʿāda or the concept of ‘Happiness’ is the most important concept underlying al-Ghazali’s ethical thought. Al-Saʿāda (Happiness) is the highest aim of human life in this world and the hereafter. The highest form of happiness in this world refers to the Love of God (al-uns wa’l hubb) and the ultimate happiness in the hereafter is the Vision of God Himself (al-liqā’ wa’l mushāhada) (al-Ghazali, 3:220).

There are two forms of al-Saʿāda:
1. Al-Saʿāda as the means (in this world):
a. ‘Ilm wa’l ‘Amal (Knowledge and Action) – the best action according to the Prophet s.a.w. is husn al-khuluq (good character). He quoted a Prophetic hadith: “one of the [sign] of happiness in human being is good character (husn al-khuluq).” (al-Ghazali, 3:50; A. Quasem, 59).
b. All the worldly goods such as food, clothes, etc. that serve as means for a man to gain knowledge and action (al-‘ilm wa’l ‘amal) (al-Ghazali, 3:220; A. Quasem, 58).
b. Al-Khuluq al-Hasan (Good Character):

The concept of good character (husn al-khuluq) is the focus of discussion in this chapter since good character is an important means towards happiness (al-sa’āda) and the foundation of religion (asās al-islām) (al-Ghazali: 3:52). It is a central theme in al-Ghazali’s discourse on ethics which focuses on the reality of good character (haqīqa husn’l khuluq) and the method to accomplish good character (al-Ghazali, 3:49).

2. Happiness (Al-Sa’āda) as the ultimate end (in the hereafter):

- Definition of Character (al-Khuluq):
“Internal established state of the soul (hay’a fi’l nafs rāsikha) which enables it to perform its action without any action or deliberation” (al-Ghazali, 3:53). It refers to the state of the soul (hay’a al-nafs) spiritual form (al-sūra al-bātina) of human being.
- There are four components of Character (al-Khuluq):
  1. action (al-fi’l)
  2. strength (al-qudra)
  3. knowledge (al-ma’rifā)
  4. state of the soul (hay’a li’l nafs)
- The Four Pillars of Good Character ➔ the balance (equilibrium) of the 4 faculties of the soul (al-Ghazali, 3:53):
  the faculty of knowledge (quwwa al-‘ilm), the faculty of anger (quwwa al-ghadab), the faculty of desire (quwwa al-shahwa), the faculty of justice (quwwa al-‘adâla).
c. Al-I’tidāl (Balance / Equilibrium):
The concept of mean (i’tidāl) is the central aim of good character traits. The aim of training for good character is to bring the soul back to the state of the mean (i’tidāl) that refers to the healthy condition of the soul, while deviation from it constitutes it sickness (Al-Ghazali, 3:60, A. Quasem, 85). Good character (husn al-khuluq) is characterized by the balance (i’tidāl) state of the soul. Simultaneously the balance state of the soul is characterized by the concept of mean (al-wast). The mean refers to the condition of justice (al-‘adāla) and the virtuous (al-fadīla) state of the soul (Al-Ghazali, 3: 54-55; A. Quasem, 81-82).

d. Ummahāt al-Fadā’il (Cardinal Virtues):
The balanced state of the soul (al-i’tidāl) will produce the four cardinal virtues or the ‘mother [root] of good character’ (ummahāt al-akhlāq).

Refers to the midpoint or the central point between excess and deficiency (wast bayn al-ifrāt wa’l tafrīt) (al-Ghazali, 3:57). Repeatedly highlighted by Ghazali who refers the condition to be the middle or midpoint between the two extremes (al-wast fi’l akhlāq dun al-tarafayn). When a person achieves a balanced state of the four faculties of the soul i.e.: the faculty of knowledge (quwwa al-‘ilm), the faculty of anger (quwwa al-ghadab), the faculty of desire (quwwa al-shahwah), the faculty of justice (quwwa al-‘adālah) which are guided by revelation and reason, he has perfectly accomplished good character (husn al-khuluq mutlaqan). It refers to the mean state (i’tidāl) which is the sound state of the soul (al-Ghazali 3:54, A. Quasem, 81). The mean is virtuous whereas the two extremes – excess and deficiency are the vices (radhīlatān).

There are four cardinal virtues according to al-Ghazali:
1. al-Hikma (Wisdom)
2. al-Shajā’a (Courage)
3. al-‘Ifsa (Temperance)
1. al-Hikma (Wisdom):
   a. Husn al-tadbîr (administrative quality)
   b. Jūdat al-dhihn (excellence of mind)
   c. Thaqābat al-ra’y (insightful in decision-making)
   d. Isābat al-Zann wa tafattun li daqā’iq al-a’māl wa khafāyā āfât al-nufūs (awareness of the subtle actions and hidden evils of the soul).

2. al-Shajā’a (Courage):
   a. Al-Karam (generosity)
   b. Al-Najda (bravery)
   c. Kasr al-nafs (self-control)
   d. Ihtimāl (endurance)
   e. Al-Hilm (forbearance)
   f. Al-Thabāt (firmness)
   g. Kazm al-ghayz (control of anger)
   h. Al-Waqār (weightiness)
   i. Al-Tawaddud (friendliness)

When the faculty of knowledge (quwwa al-‘ilm) is at the mean state, the virtue of wisdom (hikma) is achieved. Wisdom is a state of the soul which enables man to distinguish between true and false in statements, between right from wrong in beliefs and between good and evil in actions. Wisdom is considered the root of good character (ra’s al-akhlāq al-hasana) (al-Ghazali, 3:54, A. Quasem, 80). When it is at the extreme of excess, the vice of wickedness (khubth) is produced; and when it is at the extreme of deficiency, the vice of stupidity (balah) is generated (al-Ghazali, 3:54, A. Quasem, 81).

When the faculty of anger (quwwa al-ghadab) is at the mean state (i’tidāl), the virtue of courage (al-shajā’a) is achieved. Courage (al-shajā’a) is a state of the soul in which the faculty of anger (al-ghadab) is always obedient to reason (‘aql) (al-Ghazali, 3:54, A. Quasem, 85). If it is at the extreme of excess, the vice of rashness (tahawwur) appears. If it is at the extreme of deficiency, the vice of cowardice (jubn) appears in the soul (al-Ghazali, 3:54, A. Quasem, 81-82).
3. al-‘Iffa (Temperance) :
   a. Al-Sakhā’ (generosity)
   b. Al-Hayā’ (modesty)
   c. Al-Sabr (patience)
   d. Al-Musāmaha (forgiveness)
   e. Al-Qanā’a (contentment)
   f. Al-Wara’ (piety)
   g. Al-Latāfa (kindness)
   h. Al-Musā’ada (helpfulness)
   i. Al-Zarf (gracefulness)
   j. Qillat al-Tam’ (lack of greed or moderate)

   When the faculty of desire (quwwa al-shahwa) is at the state of the mean (i’tidāl), the virtue of temperance (‘iffā) is achieved. Temperance (‘iffā) is a state of the soul in which the faculty of desire is discipline under the command of reason and Islamic Law (bi ta’dīb al-‘aql wa’l Shar’). When it is at the extreme of excess, it produces the vice of greed (sharah) and when it is at the extreme of deficiency, it produces the annihilation of desire (jumūd) which lead towards other destructive character such as greed, shameless, miserliness, envy, self-humiliation, etc. (al-Ghazali, 3: 54, A. Quasem, 81-82, 85).

4. al-‘Adāla (Justice) :

   - The virtue of justice (‘adāla) is defined as a state of the soul in which anger and desire are controlled under the dictates of reason and Shari’a. It is the state which is described as the golden mean (al-wast) or equilibrium (i’tidāl) of the three faculties: reason (‘aql), desire (shahwa) and anger (ghadab). Therefore in al-Ghazali’s view, justice (‘adāla) are has no two extremes but only the opposite i.e. injustice (zulm/jawr) (al-Ghazali, 54-55, A. Quasem, 85-86).
2. Curriculum Content:

a. Educational Methods in the Formation of Good Character:
Al-Ghazali’s discourses in this chapter focuses on the Formation and Development of Good Character. Firstly, he explains the virtues (fadīla) and the reality (haqīqa) of good character. He further explains in detail about the possibility of changing someone’s character through spiritual training. Besides, he specifies the training methods for character refinement and spiritual training (tahdhib al-akhlāq wa riyāda al-nafs) (Al-Ghazali, 3:49). Since the focus of this research was to develop the curriculum content for developing children’s character the researcher will be focusing on al-Ghazali’s educational approach in the formation and development of good character.

If the actions which proceed from the state are evil, the state from which they derive is called bad character.” (Al-Ghazali, 3:53, A.Quasem, 79).</td>

A balanced (al-i’tidāl) state of character is a sign of spiritual health (sihhat al-nafs). Every child is born in the balanced state of fitra (mu’tadilan sahīh al-fitra), it is the parents who [influence him] to be a Jew, or a Christian, or a Magian (al-Ghazali, 3:61). The perfection of the soul and good character will be attained through the process of: (al-Ghazali, 3:61)

| a. habituation (al-i’tiyād) |
| b. instruction (al-ta’līm) |
| c. nurturing (al-tarbiyya) |
| d. refinement of character (tahdhib al-akhlāq) |
Factors (al-sabab) which influence the formation of good character:

1. The naturally inborn good character (bi jūd ilāhīy wa kamāl al-fitrīy). It refers to people who possess good character naturally since birth. All the faculties of the soul are created in equilibrium and the faculties of desire and anger obey the dictates of reason and the Sharī'a, so that they are good by nature, such as the prophets (a.s). (Al-Ghazali, 3:58).

2. The acquired good character traits (bi’l iktisāb). It refers to the acquired character through several processes:
   i. the process of habituation (i’tiyād) through self-mortification and self-training (al-mujāhada wa’l riyāda). Al-Ghazali’s discourse in this chapter focuses on the second type of character that is the acquired one.

Factors (al-sabab) which influence the formation of good character:

There are two kinds of Good Character:

1. The naturally inborn good character (bi jūd ilāhīy wa kamāl al-fitrīy). It refers to people who possess good character naturally since birth. All the faculties of the soul are created in equilibrium and the faculties of desire and anger obey the dictates of reason and the Sharī'a, so that they are good by nature, such as the prophets (a.s). (Al-Ghazali, 3:58).

2. The acquired (bi’l iktisāb) good character. It refers to the acquired character through several processes:
   i. the process of habituation (i’tiyād) (Al-Ghazali, 3:58, A.Quasem, 89) which begins with the process of self-mortification (mujāhada) and self-training (riyāda) i.e. taking pain to perform the actions that lead towards good character until they become habitual and pleasant. In this process, the actions associated with good character are firstly enforced until they become part of his nature (al-Ghazali, 3:59). The process is based on his theory of circular relationship (dawr) between soul and body (al-nafs...
ii. Learning through observation and association (mushahada arbāb al-fā’āl al-jamīl wa musahabatihim) (al-Ghazali, 3:60, A. Quasem, 90).

wa’il badan). It is a gradual painstaking effort (haml al-nafs) of performing those actions that necessarily proceed from the good character until they become habitual (tabī’a) (al-Ghazali, 3:59,89, A. Quasem, 89). For instance, a man who wish to be generous must oblige himself to perform generous acts, continuously struggling with his soul in giving away some of his wealth until it becomes habitual and pleasant to his character (al-Ghazali, 3:58, A. Quasem, 89).

ii. the process of observation (mushahada) and companionship (musahaba) (Al-Ghazali, 3:60, A. Quasem, 90). Al-Ghazali believes that a temperament can be [influenced] by another temperament (al-tab’y asrīq min al-tab’y al-shar’ wa’ll khayr) both its good and evil character, which means character, can be acquired through association and companionship. It is for this reason al-Ghazali emphasizes on the selection of friends and companions as the basis for child education (asl ta’dīb al-sibyān). It is clearly mentioned in Ihyā’ that “the basis of child education is protection from evil companions (asl ta’dīb al-sibyān al-hifz min quranā’ sū’)” (al-Ghazali, 3:73, iii. learning (ta'allum) through the acquisition of knowledge (al-Ghazali, 3:3, 61, A. Quasem, 90).

iii. the process of learning (ta'llum) (Al-Ghazali, 3:60, A. Quasem, 90). In order to refine his character, one has to recognize his spiritual imperfections. It requires prior knowledge of the soul (al-'ilm al-bātin). This is why Al-Ghazali explains about the science of the heart ('ilm ahwāl al-qalb) prior to his discourse on disciplining the soul and the refinement of character (riyāda al-nafs wa tahdhīb al-akhlāq) in volume 3. He views the light of knowledge and certainty as the medication for spiritual diseases (adwiyatuhā bi nūr al-'ilm wa'l yaqīn) (al-Ghazali, 65, A. Quasem, 59). Therefore one has to keep in touch with an insightful and knowledgeable teacher or a spiritual guide.
c. Developmental Stages of Children’s Character:

1. Birth until the Age of Discernment (Mumayyiz):

   i. The faculty of desire (quwwa al-shahwa):
   It is the first faculty that appears in a child eg. a child by instinct seeks for milk without any instruction or direction.
   Since it is the oldest faculty existing in man, the faculty of desire is the most difficult to restrain and the least susceptible to discipline. The first trait to be controlled according to al-Ghazali, is the greed for food.

   ii. The faculty of intellect (quwwa al-‘ilm):
   The nursing infant initially apprehends through:
   First stage: the sensible spirit (al-rūh al-hassas) that functions via his five external senses (hawās al-khams):
2. The Age of Discernment (Mumayyiz) until Puberty (Bālígh)

Third stage: the onset of the faculty of discernment (al-tamyīz) which enables a child to distinguish between good and evil and enables him to grasp abstract ideas. The appearance of this faculty is God’s gift of illuminating the light of intelligence over the child (al-Ghazali, 3:72, A. Gil’adi, 52). The first sign of discernment faculty is the presence of modesty (al-hayā’) in which he begins to feel diffident and ashamed of doing certain things. Therefore it is possible to address the child’s logic and to direct his actions through words of censure or praise (A. Gil’adi, 52). The age of discernment (al-tamyīz) is generally perceived as an appropriate time to begin the formal education. It is also the age whereby children are primarily taught to practice the religious commandments, especially in performing the ritual prayers as mentioned by the Prophet (pbuh).

Fourth: Perfection of his intellect during puberty (kamāl al-‘aql ‘ind al-bulūgh). At this stage, he is able to understand the underlying reasons for his spiritual training and these reasons need to be clearly explained to him (Al-Ghazali, 3:72, A. Quasem, 99).

iii. The faculty of anger (quwwa al-ghadab):

The faculty of anger exists when a child approaches the age of seven. It is an indispensable need for man to protect himself from any element that threatens his life and property. However, the child needs to be trained to counterbalance the faculty of anger (and desire) through the habits of sleeping, dressing and conduct in the society (Al-Ghazali, 3: 73-74 , A. Gil’adi, 58).
d. Educational Approach for Children’s Character Development:

Al-Ghazali believes that training children is one of the most important issues (min ahamm ‘l ‘umūr) and childhood is the most critical stage for the process of character formation and development. If a child is brought up in a good tradition, he will be accustomed to virtuous life and will finally achieve happiness in this world and the hereafter. On the contrary if he is accustomed to immorality, his life will be ruined (Al-Ghazali, 3:72, A. Quasem, 96).

Al-Ghazali’s approach for children’s character development is summarized into five main categories:

1. Self-discipline
2. Self-refinement
3. Teaching good character
4. Avoidance of bad companions
5. Prevention from luxurious life and culture

(Al-Ghazali, 3:72)

There are three major phases in Al-Ghazali’s approach:

First phase: Birth until the Age of Discernment (Mumayyiz):

1. The baby need to be nursed and suckled by a virtuous lady who consumes legitimate food (ta’kul al-halāl), for there is no blessings (lā baraka) in the milk consumed from illegitimate sources (al-harām) (al-Ghazali, 3:72).

Second phase: The Age of Discernment until Puberty (Bāligh):

The age of discernment (mumayyiz) in childhood is marked by the appearance of modesty (al-hayā’), which need to be encouraged through a good self-discipline (bi husn al-ta’dīb) by:

1. Teaching him table manners – the desire for food should be controlled and disciplined by pronouncing the name of God (Bismillāh) before eating, using his right hand, beginning with the nearest food, not gazing at different dishes or at others eating, chewing his food well and not smearing his hands and clothes with food. He should be trained to be content with whatever is available and to give others preference over himself in food. Sometimes he should eat coarse bread. Those who eat moderately should be praised and those who eat excessively should be criticized before him (Al-Ghazali, 3:72, A. Quasem, 97);

2. Preventing him from living luxuriously and mixing with children who are accustomed to comfort, luxury and pride. Parents should closely monitor his peers since “the basis of child education (asl ta’dīb al-sibyān) is the protection from evil companions (al-hifz min qurānā’ al-sū’)” (Al-Ghazali, 3:72);

3. Preventing him from love poetry since it sows the seeds of corruption in his heart (al-Ghazali, 3:73, A. Quasem, 98);

4. Rewarding the good habits and deeds in front of others. His mistake for the first time should be ignored. However, if it is repeated, he should be privately advised and warned so that it will not be repeated. The mother should warn him of informing the misconduct to the father, while the father should preserve the effectiveness of his speech (hayba al-kalām) by irregularly scolding the child (al-Ghazali, 3:73, A.Quasem, 98);

5. Training the child to endure tough and strenuous life by getting him accustomed to rough bedding, coarse food and plain clothes. A boy should be trained to wear plain cloths since the colorful and silken dressings are associated with ladies (Al-Ghazali,3:72-73, A.Quasem, 97-98). The child should also be prevented from being indolent by inculcating the habit of walking and exercising for physical fitness instead of sleeping during the day (al-Ghazali, 73, A.Quasem, 98).

1. Inculcating the virtues of humility (al-tawādu‘), respectfulness (al-ikrām) and politeness (talattuf fi‘l kalām) in his social conduct. It is forbidden for the child to boast of his parent’s and his own possession. The child of a rich family should be taught to be generous while the child of a poor family should be taught to avoid greediness (al-Ghazali, 3:73, A.Quasem, 98). In order to train them to be respectful and polite, the child should be prevented from displaying insolent manners (al-waqāha) such as speaking excessively, spitting, yawning or wiping his nose in the presence of others. He should not turn his back to anyone, cross his legs or lean his chin and support his head on his hands for this is signs of indolence (dalīl al-kasl). (al-Ghazali, 3:73, A.Quasem, 98-99);

7. Teaching him al-Qur’an, sayings of the Prophet (pbuh) (ahādīth) and historical accounts of the virtuous people in schools (al-maktab), so that he will love the righteous (hubb al-sālihīn) (al-Ghazali, 3:73). The child should begin his formal education as soon as his faculty of discernment (al-tamyīz) begins to emerge;

8. Teaching and training the child to practice the religious commandments especially in self-purification (al-tahāra), prayers (al-solāt) and fasting (al-sawm) for a few days in the month of Ramadān;

9. Teaching and training him to abide by the limit of Law (hudūd al-Shar‘), for instance the legal and illegal (al-halāl wa’l harām) matters in Islam. The child should also be cautioned against gold, silk, theft and other sinful acts.
Third Phase: The Age of Puberty (Bāligh)

At the age of puberty (bāligh), a child is capable of understanding the inner spirit and reason underlying his previous training and the religious commandments. The reasons should be clearly explained to him, e.g. the purpose of eating is to acquire strength for devotional acts and not for the sake of pleasure (al-Ghazali, 3:74, A. Quasem, 99).

Introduction to Human Nature and Psycho-Spiritual [Character] Development

A. The Objectives of Character Education:
   1. The attainment of Happiness
   2. The attainment of Cardinal Virtues

B. Theoretical Framework of Character Development:
   1. The Concept of ‘Character’ (al-Khuluq)
   2. Influential Factors on Character Formation and Development:
      i. Heredity
      ii. Socialization
      iii. Habituation
      iv. Education

Description:
A brief introduction about the nature of human soul and its psycho-spiritual development. Human being composed of two entities: body (jasad) and soul (ruh). Body refers to the physical creation and soul refers to the spirit of human being.
Therefore ‘Character’ (al-Khuluq) refers to the attribute of human soul. In this topic, the definition and the conception of ‘character’ (al-khuluq) is explained. It is an introduction about the nature of human soul and its faculties:

a. the faculty of intellect (quwwat al-‘aql)

b. the faculty of anger (quwwat al-ghadhab)

c. the faculty of desire (quwwat al-shahwah).

A balanced (al-i’tidāl) state of character is a sign of spiritual health (sihhat al-nafs). Every child is born in the balanced state of fitrah (mu’tadilan sahīh al-fitrah), it is the parents and society who distract and influence him to turn away from his balanced state of fitrah. Therefore, a brief introduction about the importance of education in the process of character development is highlighted and discussed. The objectives of character education is outlined based on the content analysis of Tahdhib al-Akhlaq and Ihya’ Ulum al-Din. The influential factors on character development are explained with examples provided by the texts. Respondents are encouraged to reflect on their personal experience about the factors which influence the formation and development of their own character.

Description:

An explanation about the formative and developmental stages of character which generally involves three major phases:

Phase 1: Birth (Mawlud) until the Age of Discernment (Mumayyiz)

Phase 2: Age of Discernment (Mumayyiz) until Puberty (Baligh)

Phase 3: Puberty (Baligh) onwards.

Each phases of character development signifies specific development of the three faculties of human soul: intellect (al-‘aql), anger (al-ghadhab) and desire (al-shahwah).
The formative stage of character begins since birth until puberty; and the character will be further developed and refined from the age of puberty onwards. Therefore childhood is a critical stage of development since it significantly marks the period of character formation. When a child experience a good process of character formation, he or she will develop a well-balanced character at the age of puberty. The main virtues will be formed and further developed until it achieves the state of equilibrium (al-I’tidal).

Description:
A detailed explanation about the educational methods in the formation and development of good character based on the two texts: Tahdīb al-Akhlaq and Iḥyāʾ ‘Ulum al-Dīn. The inculcation of good character based on true knowledge (‘ilm) and right practice (‘amal) is called ‘ta’dīb’.

Explanation and examples of ‘adab’ and ‘ta’dīb’ provided by the two scholars are highlighted.

Besides, group discussions are conducted in order to gain respondents’ feedback and understanding. Examples of each items are discussed in groups. Respondents’ are encouraged to relate their views regarding current social issues and discuss how to overcome the social and identity crises through the above methods of character formation and development.
Topic 6  Case Studies: Analysis of Current Issues

1. Influential Factors on Character Formation
2. Crises of Character
3. Behavioral Management Issues

Description:
This session will examine respondents’ understanding about the previous discussions about character formation and development; as well as its relation with current social issues. Group discussions are conducted to discuss case studies regarding the above issues. It reveals the relationship of the character development theories and current social phenomena. Finally, respondents are given time to plan for their future, i.e. how to develop good and well-behaved children in the future.

Hubungi 03-41075479 atau 03-41075487 (waktu pejabat)

Siapa patut hadir?:

- Ibu bapa yang ingin mencemerlangkan anak-anak mereka
- Bakal ibu bapa
- Guru-guru dan pendidik
- Ibu bapa atau penjaga yang menjaga anak-anak istimewa

Kursus ini ialah untuk ibu bapa yang ingin tahu bagaimana mencemerlangkan anak yang normal dan memulihkan anak yang bermasalah seperti Cerebral Palsy, Down Syndrome, Hiperaktif, Autisme yang dikatakan lembab belajar, yang pekak, buta dan sebagainya.

Intisari kursus ini:

Pengenalan
Selama lebih 20 tahun, NURY telah melatih lebih 200,000 ibu bapa di Malaysia dan Singapura dalam membantu meningkatkan pembangunan anak mereka dengan tujuan untuk:
- Membangunkan anak-anak yang sihat, cerdik dan mulia
- Menambahkan jumlah ibu bapa yang cekap dalam meningkatkan kesihatan, kecerdikan dan sahsiah anak
- Menambahkan jumlah ibu bapa yang minat dan berupaya memajukan keluarga masing-masing
- Memajukan keluarga dan anak cemerlang sehingga amalan itu menjadi adat resam masyarakat Keistimewaan kursus

- Program ini merangkumi usia anak ketika di dalam rahim ibu di mana keutamaan diberi bagi 3 tahun pertama usia anak.
- Penglibatan ibubapa secara menyeluruh. Cth: diberi latihan dan kaunseling.
- Mengadakan kursus dan kaunseling berterusan untuk ibu yang mengandung:- Program IN-UTERO.
- Program yang bersepadu di mana melibatkan proses dan tahap Pembangunan Sistem Saraf Otak.
- Mewujudkan program kerjasama dengan pusat kajian pendidikan Antarabangsa seperti Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential, Philadelphia USA (IAHP).
- Sistem penilaian bagi setiap anak, ibubapa dan program yang diadakan dirumah.
- Kesan program akan dirasai dalam masa 3-6 bulan bukan sahaja kepada anak malah ibu bapa juga.
