

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PART I

Section		Page
I.	GENERAL COMMENT	1
	Nature of the Exercise	1
	Influences	1
	Positivism	3
	Categories and Data	6
II.	DEFINITIONS AND BASIC CONCEPTS.	8
	Scarcity.	11
	Economic Good	11
III.	THE NATURE AND SCOPE OF ECONOMICS	13
	Economics as a Science.	13
	Economics and Ends.	15
	Economics and the Aesthetics	16
	Economic and Ethics	16
	Economics and Technology.	17
	Psychology and Economics.	19
	Economics and the Exchange Economy.	20
IV.	SOME ASPECTS OF METHOD.	22
	Equilibrium Analysis.	22
	The Assumption of Rationality	24
	The Economic Man.	26
V.	THE NATURE AND THE DERIVATION OF ECONOMIC GENERALISATIONS.	27
	The Fundamental Postulates of Economic Analysis.	27
	Economic Law and its relation to History.	30
	The inevitability of Economic Laws.	31

Section

VII.	THE APPLICABILITY OF ECONOMIC GENERALISATIONS AND THEIR LIMITATIONS	33
	The Limitations of Economic Laws.	33
	The Possibility of a Theory of Economic Development	35
	The Meaning of Economic Statistics.	36
	The Significance of Time Series	39
	Statistical Laws of Supply and demand	40
	Quantitative Economics	41
	The Function of Empirical Studies	42
	Interpersonal Comparisons of Utility.	44
	The Neutrality of the Theory of Equilibrium	44
VII.	THE SIGNIFICANCE OF ECONOMICS	46

PART II

Section		Page
I.	THE SCOPE OF ECONOMICS.	49
	Economics and ethical values.	49
	Individual choice and given ends.	51
	Choice and Resource Allocation.	54
	Economics and Philosophy.	61
II.	INTERPERSONAL COMPARISONS OF UTILITY.	64
III.	QUANTITATIVE ECONOMICS.	73
	A new Economic Theory	73
	Deductive and empirical methods compared.	75
	Measurability of relations.	77
	Conclusion.	79
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	80