

Abstract

The researcher completed a dissertation entitled "Mastery of Masdar: A Study among Arabic Students in private institutions Perak". This study deals with the mastery of students in private institutions associated with the state of Perak in Arabic Grammar. This includes mastery of skills in speaking and writing in Arabic.

The contents of this dissertation touches on several matters relating to mastery of Masdar among students in terms of performance as well as an understanding of this topic and also describe some of the problems that affects student achievement.

In the early stage, researcher studied through the library books related to Masdar and described in a chapter of this dissertation. It includes several selected chapters of Masdar based on the learners' syllabus which who are the respondents for this study.

Next the dissertation describes the methods of survey respondents to evaluate the capability and control measures and review the elements that help the level of student achievement. Not forgetting the causes which deteriorate the control, including confusion and weaknesses of students. These elements obtained through the distribution of questionnaires to the students related to students' background and the questions related to Masdar. Data are also obtained through interview sessions among students and instructors in the particular institutions.

At the end of this dissertation researcher concludes and makes recommendations based on findings that is Masdar dominance among the students affected by the learning and teaching techniques that help stimulate students' achievement.