 Chapter
I. INTRODUCTION	1
Historical Background	1
Geographical Distribution	3
II. PRODUCTION AND EXPORT	4
Method of Mining	4
Local and European Production	4
Causes of Changes in Output	6
i) Reasons for Output Reduction	6
ii) Reasons for Output Increase	11
Export of Iron Ore	11
i) Main Export Centres	11
ii) Value of Exports	12
Stockpiling of Iron-Ore	14
III. EMPLOYMENT	17
Total Employment in Comparison with the Whole Mining Industry	17
Types of Labour	19
i) Mining Labour	19
ii) Construction Labour	20
Fluctuation in Employment	20
i) The Instability of Employment	20
ii) Factors Affecting Employment	22
Employment by Racial Groups	25
The Importance of European Mines	27

IV.	MARKETING	28
	Classification of Ore for Export	28
	Contract Buying and Selling	28
	The Nature of Prices	29
	i) The Existence of a Stockpile	30
	ii) The Monopsonistic Buying Position of Japan	30
	iii) Japanese Involvement in Production	30
	The Method of Determining Contract Prices ..	31
	i) Impurities in the Iron-ore	31
	ii) The Relative Bargaining Power	31
	iii) The Expected Life of the Mines	31
	iv) The Geographical Position of the Mine	32
V.	THE FUTURE OF IRON-ORE MINING	34
	Estimated Known Reserves and the Rate of Mining	34
	Factors Affecting the Future of the Industry	34
	i) The Iron-ore Reserves	34
	ii) Foreign Competition	36
	iii) The Use of Scrap Iron and Scrap Steel	39
VI.	CONCLUSION	40
