

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

There are many challenges faced as I tried to complete my doctorate study. I want to take this opportunity to thank those who have supported me throughout the process. I would like to thank God for enabling me, granting me the discipline and perseverance in completing the thesis. Seven extraordinary women, willingly shared their most intimate stories and experiences with me, without them, this study would be impossible. I appreciate their strength and courage to relive a difficult time in their lives by sharing their life experiences with a stranger like me.

Dr. Melati has been an important part of my doctoral study, I have learned from her through course work and her supervision. I appreciated her willingness to step up and fill in the role of being my supervisor when Dr. Suradi rested in peace. It is also important to acknowledge my ex-supervisor late Dr. Suradi, he assisted me with the conception and proposal of this study. Most importantly he demonstrated to me dedication to work till the end of his life.

There are many people in the Counseling program at University Malaya whose assistance and support I appreciate. I would like to thank the panel of readers (Head of Counseling Department, Dr. Zahari; Dr. Haslee; Dr. Diana; Dr. Rohaida; Dr. Esther & Dr. Nabeel) for giving me constructive feedback. I want to acknowledge all of my fellow doctoral students, I want to especially thank my peers in the program, for being so kind, supportive and inspirational. I am grateful for their support and feel that I have made some very special friends along the way.

A special thank you to my husband, Cheit Chai (lovingly known as C.C Tan) for encouraging me to embark on this journey of pursuing my dream, without his encouragement, prayers and support this would be impossible. He allowed me the time and space to focus on writing this thesis. He acted as driver when I needed to travel outstation to interview participants, and took on a large share of parenting to allow me time to write. I also want to thank my two girls, Qi Ning and Qi Yu who gave me permission to be less than perfect mom who cannot devote time to play with them or read for them. They have been most understanding and got used to my reply of “mummy can’t do this with you now as mummy need to work on the thesis.” They were patience with me through this long journey of research.

To my family and friends, I am thankful for the prayers and encouraging words especially during those times when the going gets tough. I thank you for the time you allowed me to devote myself to work on this thesis and your patience with my preoccupation with it. I appreciate the senior management of Nilai University for giving me the flexibility at work to complete my study. Last but not least, I am thankful to Ms Alina and Dr. Deborah Johnson for the editorial support. To God be all glory, honor, and praise.
