(1). The language in the Contracts Act 1950 appears to confine 'proposal' to an offer to b legally bound to a promise.
Correction:
(2). If they were not offers, then no contract could come to existence between the parties at the moment when the appellants' printing orders were issued.
Correction:
(3). In the case of Schawel v Reade, the defendant interrupted the plaintiff from examining the horse by saying, 'You need not look for anything : the horse is perfectly sound'
Correction:
(4). Section 8(2) of the Sale of Goods Act provides that silence as to the price , and will not apply where an agreement states that the parties will subsequently agree the price to be paid
Correction:
(5). If the terms or the circumstances of the offer do no more than suggest a mode of acceptance, it seems that the offeree would not be bound to this mode.
Correction:

(6). A written agreement was drawn up whereby the defendant agreed to take a lease of a house for a definite period and at a fixed rent, but 'subject to the preparation and approval from a formal contract'.
Correction:
(7). It is undoubtedly true that every man is by the law of nature bound to fulfil his engagements.
Correction:
(0) If the continue to the state of the stat
(8). If the contracts are not continuous in their operation, they are not binding towards the minor unless he ratified them within a reasonable time after attaining majority.
Correction:
(9). The first problem is whether the offeree has at this stage accepted the offer, and the second is whether he has provided consideration for the offeror's promise.
Correction:
(10). As it is impossible for the offeror to ensure that the notice of withdrawal comes to the attention of everyone who knew of the offer, it seems to be enough for him to take reasonable steps to bring the withdrawal to the attention of such persons

(1)	The provisions of the Marine Insurance Act offer an obvious example of terms implied by statute as the culmination of a long process of development.
(2)	There was much academic discussion on the nature of the doctrine and puzzlement as to its content.
	In general, the parties are entitled to provide for the exclusion of terms which would otherwise be implied.
	The plaintiff agreed with X to buy a plot of land from him subject to the approval by the plaintiff's solicitor 'of title and restrictions'.

(5)	We confess we cannot see any difference between this condition and the requirement for FIC approval in the case under the present appeal.
