

LIST OF TABLES

	Tables	Page
Table 2.1	Chronology of talking animal stories	13
Table 2.2	Metafunctions: Definition and function	21
Table 3.1	Process types and the assigned participants	37
Table 3.2	Types of mental process	40
Table 3.3	Examples of verbs serving as Process in behavioural clauses	46
Table 3.4	Examples of verbs serving as Process in existential clauses	48
Table 3.5	Circumstantial elements and their function	49
Table 3.6	Description of data	55
Table 3.7	Brief account of data	56
Table 3.8	Story title and code	57
Table 4.1	Clause examples of material processes and participant roles for JF and FF	68
Table 4.2	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to material processes used by JF and FF	70
Table 4.3	Clause examples of mental processes and participant roles for JF and FF	72
Table 4.4	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to mental processes used by JF and FF	74
Table 4.5	Clause examples of relational processes and participant roles for JF and FF	75
Table 4.6	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to relational processes used by JF and FF	77
Table 4.7	Clause examples of verbal processes and participant roles for JF and FF	79
Table 4.8	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to verbal processes used by JF and FF	80
Table 4.9	Clause examples of behavioural processes and participant roles for JF and FF	82
Table 4.10	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to behavioural processes used by JF and FF	83
Table 4.11	Distribution of process types used in construing the human characteristics of JF and FF	85
Table 4.12	Main and oblique participant roles undertaken by JF and FF themselves and their body parts	86
Table 4.13	Circumstantial elements used in construing the human characteristics of JF and FF	87
Table 4.14	Clause examples of material processes and participant roles for MT and LW	91
Table 4.15	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to material processes used by MT and LW	95
Table 4.16	Clause examples of mental processes and participant roles for MT and LW	99

Table 4.17	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to mental processes used by MT and LW	102
Table 4.18	Clause examples of relational processes and participant roles for MT and LW	105
Table 4.19	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to relational processes used by MT and LW\	109
Table 4.20	Clause examples of verbal processes and participant roles for MT and LW	111
Table 4.21	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to verbal processes used by MT and LW	113
Table 4.22	Clause examples of behavioural processes and participant roles for MT and LW	115
Table 4.23	Clause examples of circumstantial elements related to behavioural processes used by MT and LW	118
Table 4.24	Distribution of process types used in construing the human characteristics of MT and LW	120
Table 4.25	Main and oblique participant roles undertaken by MT and LW themselves and their body parts	121
Table 4.26	Circumstantial elements used in construing the human characteristics of MT and LW	123
Table 4.27	Human characteristics construed by JF and FF	126
Table 4.28	Human characteristics construed by MT and LW	129
Table 4.29	Summary of participant roles of JF, FF, MT and LW in percentage (%)	131