Bonjour!

Bonjour, everyone! That means “hello” in French! We finally made it to Europe, and our first stop is Paris! We’re having a good time here. It’s a really interesting place, never boring. There is a lot to see and do. Yesterday morning we went to an art gallery. It was really crowded; there were so many people! After that we went and had lunch at a restaurant. It was good but expensive. Then we walked around the old part of the city. It was so quiet and peaceful. I am writing this blog entry in a cafe in the most beautiful city square. We’re taking lots of photos.

A difficult day

Hello, everyone! Hope everything back home is going well! We’re in Cairo right now. The hotel is a long way from downtown, and it’s on a very noisy street. It’s impossible to sleep at night. We’ve visited a lot of monuments. The pyramids were fantastic! We saw the Sphinx yesterday, but it was smaller than we expected. It was really touristy, with a lot of people selling souvenirs and things. It’s also incredibly hot. Jenny feels a little sick today and she’s staying in bed. I hope she feels better when we go to Luxor.

Dear students,

Using Mobile Phones for Vocabulary Acquisition in an ESL Classroom

I am Pauline Georgina Priya a/p Hebert Sundram, currently studying Masters of English as a Second Language (MESL) from Universiti of Malaya, Kuala Lumpur.

I am conducting a study on mobile usage for vocabulary acquisition in an ESL classroom involving the IEP students at private institution of higher learning. You have been chosen as respondents for the study. You are required to fill in the information in the mobile preferences questionnaire for the purpose of the study. These inventory are used to provide information on mobile phone usage in learning English particularly vocabulary acquisition.

Your honest responses will help me gain information on your preferences in using mobile phone for vocabulary acquisition and the effectiveness of it. The information that you give will be kept confidential, and will only be used for the purpose of the study.

Your cooperation in completing these questionnaire is greatly appreciated. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

Pauline Georgina Priya a/p Hebert Sundram

August 25th

Bonjour!

Bonjour, everyone! That means “hello” in French! We we finally made it to Europe, and our first stop is Paris! We’re having a good time here. It’s a really interesting place, never boring. There is a lot to see and do. Yesterday morning we went to an art gallery. It was really crowded; there were so many people! After that we went and had lunch at a restaurant. It was good but expensive. Then we walked around the old part of the city. It was so quiet and peaceful. I am writing this blog entry in a cafe in the most beautiful city square. We’re taking lots of photos.

Love,

Alice and Jenny

August 30th

A difficult day

Hello, everyone! Hope everything back home is going well! We’re in Cairo right now. The hotel is a long way from downtown, and it’s on a very noisy street. It’s impossible to sleep at night. We’ve visited a lot of monuments. The pyramids were fantastic! We saw the Sphinx yesterday, but it was smaller than we expected. It was really touristy, with a lot of people selling souvenirs and things. It’s also incredibly hot. Jenny feels a little sick today and she’s staying in bed. I hope she feels better when we go to Luxor.

Love,

Alice and Jenny
