

ABSTRACT

This dissertation is about the readiness and preparedness of Malaysia's civilian agencies to protect the national information infrastructure from information warfare attack and the defensive capabilities of Malaysia to survive from information warfare attack. This dissertation will study the types of threats of information warfare attack to national security. Furthermore, this dissertation will study the methods used in waging information warfare attack and the defensive mechanisms or defensive strategies needed to be erected in order to annihilate the attack.